Dear James L. Robart,

I received a postcard in the mail and I object to lack of notice or full disclosure by Plaintiff's [looking at the filing it appears there are plenty of sharks on team Plaintiff] at the time this matter was introduced in Federal court. Did the Plaintiff's provide public notice they were filing a class action suit in matters Clearwire has always held are only subject to arbitration? I demand inclusion among Plaintiff Representatives and My service award of $2,000.

Clearwire is about as honest in their contracting as administrative agencies and courts, which is not very. I do recall doing business with Clearwire and not only do I recall speed issues I distinctly recall not obtaining a full disclosure on ports that are/were blocked as I recall at the time I was trying to implement a VOIP solution in my vehicle.

Due to the amount of time elapsed I further demand a full and honest disclosure in the form of a written copy of all of My records, payments, account notes [e.g. such as technical support calls], and any other account information from Clearwire in order to properly submit a claim in addition to My service award.

Since it's all about the money and there are plenty of low life sharks lined up to feed, I might as well get some too since I was actually a Clearwire customer who suffered inconvenience unlike these dirtbag sharks getting ready to bilk Clearwire for up to $2,000,000 for what? Being good paper terrorists?

Regards,

Sean Kevin Holmes
